—Last night's Sterling Gazette, in an editorial on the recent "glove contest" in this city, concludes as follows:

As the sun rose this morning out Palmyra way, stray groups of tired looking pedestrians began to drift into the city from the Dixon turnpike, and to float out again to the south toward Tampico. They had staked all on their man which spoke better for their spirit of local pride than for their good judgement, and they had gone broke. Meanwhile the Dixon sports were moving on Easy street and treading on velvet. It is but mere justice to add that the sporting gentlemen of Tampico are not often caught—dumped, they would call it,—in this way. Usually when Tampico bets, Tampico does so not so much on its judgment as what is known as "a cinch." This, it may be noted for the benefit of the uninitiated, is a dead sure thing. There have even been occasions when Tampico on such an affair as a foot race, has been charged with giving the other side the double cross; which is what the ungodly term it when a fellow backs both ends to beat the middle. Be this as it may, today Tampico walks.

FROM BAD TO WORSE

Years ago firms in the cities gave a $3 00 set of spoons with each $20.00 gold watch ordered, and no doubt they were thought to be outdoing all competitors; but in this day of enterprise they are as far behind as the old tallow candle is to the electric light, compared with firms now advertising to give a $20 00 gold watch with each set of $3 00 spoons.

It is needless to say that we have nothing of the kind to offer, but should you want a $20.00 gold watch or a $3.00 set of spoons; we have them, and you can rely on getting your money worth every time.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS WEDDING.

Crouch-Flint Nuptuals at Presbyterian Church Last Night—A Pleasant Occasion—Dixon Society Again in a Whirl.

The wedding of Mr. Herbert Edwin Crouch to Miss Grace Flint last night at the Presbyterian church was a brilliant affair; pure and true in the love which it sealed, æsthetic in its surrounding, and perfect in the details which go to make up a magnificent; social triumph

'Twas a beautiful night, the earth, the elements, and the empyrean were at rest. The only things unquiet were the shifting clouds which oft during the evening concealed the heavenly bodies; but at the appointed hour of eight, the sky was clear, the stars were brightly shining, and the moon cast its silvery shadows over the church, but that pale crescent, the emblem of Oriental paganism, as if to show reverence for the holy home of the christian cross, receded behind a cloud just as the ceremony began. What auspicious omens! The clouds departing and revealing the full glory of the heavens; from which the prophet would draw visions of illustrious prosperity and sweet felicity. Again the crescent giving way to the cross; from this the ancient priest would fortell a life of noble christianity. May these happy auguries prefigure a blessed union of tranquillity and success.

The church was handsomely decorated with pines and chrysanthemums, the prevailing colors being green and yellow. Across the front was a picturesque bank of green, representing a landscape scene beyond. From the center of the roof hung verdant festoons; each window was also draped in green. The balustrade in front of the choir was a mass of palms of varied species. Everywhere were tastefully intermingled yellow chrysanthemums, the combination giving a very pretty effect. But the most art displayed in the ornamentation of the church was at the altar. In relief to the landscape scene was the sacred shrine, overspread with the colors yellow and green and surmounted by a golden candelabra. Mrs. H. T. Noble and Miss Barge directed the decorations and certainly they can be proud of their work. Into this place of fairy loveliness the fashion and beauty of our city came, and in the reserved seats were many distinguished and accomplished guests. The ushers were Messrs Wm. McBride, J. E. Thomas, Amos Bosworth, W. V. E. Steel and G. B. Brubaker, of Dixon, and J. C. Billingslea, of Chicago. At eight o'clock the inspiring strains of Lohengrin's wedding march were heard, and then came the entrance of the bridal party. First were the bridesmaids, Misses Jones, Whittelsey, Cramer, Barge, Ingraham and Carpenter, who entered from the northeast vestibule and walked up the middle aisle, then separating, came back on the sides and around again to the middle. Then the ushers in two lines took their places. Through this double row the party marched in the following order: the page, little Chauncey Boucher, bearing upon a white satin pillow the wedding ring; the maid-of-honor, Miss Arnold, then the bride, Miss Flint. Simultaneously down the side aisle the groom and his best man, Mr. Jewell, entered. They all proceeded to the altar where the bride was met by her father. The march ceased, but all through the ceremony there came from Strong's orchestra, which was stationed in the rear of the church, strains of music, low and sweet. The page advanced to the best man, presenting the ring, and then gave the pillow to the maid-of-honor, who placed it before the bride who kneeled upon it. The bride and groom then took their places under a lover's knot of yellow chrysanthemums. The service was read by Rev. Morgan, assisted by Rev. Earngey. At the conclusion of the prayer the choir rendered the chant "Our Father." When all the sacred rites had been thus completed the bridal party left the church in reverse order, the brides maids strewing chrysanthemums down through the middle aisle, and the grand service was over.

THE RECEPTION.

Immediately after the wedding the scene was changed from the solemn service at the church to the gay festivities in the college residence of Mr. and Mrs. Flint. The campus was brilliantly illuminated by headlights, and the buildings and grounds looked very pretty and inviting. In the vestibule Henderson's Orchestra discoursed exquisite music which added much to the pleasure of the evening.

The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Flint, Grandpa Kennard, Mrs King, Mr. and Mrs. Crane, Miss Carrie Crouch, the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Crouch, the maid-of-honor, Miss Arnold, the best man, Mr. Jewell, Misses Cramer and Whittelsey, Mr. Billingslea, Mrs. Earl, Mr. and Mrs. Dille. Mr. and Mrs. Crouch stood under a canopy of pink ribbons and twining smilax, and behind them was a bank of potted plants. Pink carnations were the distinctive features at the house as yellow chrysanthemums had been at the church. Mr. McBride, the head usher, acted as master of ceremonies, conducting and introducing the guests who spent the time in delightful conversation. In the dining room light refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake, were served. The reception was a social success in every way, and everywhere are heard expressions of praise for the host's hospitality and splendid entertainment

THE OUT OF TOWN GUESTS.

The following persons, both guests and members of the wedding party, were present from abroad: Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Morgan, of Lodi, Wisconsin; Mr. Morgan is pastor of the First Methodist church at Lodi and read the service here; Mrs. Morgan is a sister to the groom; Mr. Kennard, Columbus, Ind., grandfather of the bride; Messrs. E. S. Jewell, M. H. Luther, J. C. Billingslea and Messrs. and Mesdames A. Davis, Frank King, Will Abbott, E. S. Whittelsey, all of Chicag; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crane, Watertown, S. Dakota; Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Brooks, of Elgin; Mesdames S. W. Earl and H. R. Sell, Chicago; F. Brainard, Dubuque Misses Arnold, Huntington, Indiana; (maid-of-honor) Cramer, Fairbury; Jones, Columbus, Ohio; Whittelsey, Chicago;

The Weary Body Sleeps Its Last Long Sleep—The City of Her Home Wears the Solemn Garb of Mourning and Her Neighbors Hasten to Pay a Final Tribute of Affection and Respect—The Funeral Train Greeted by Reverent Throngs at Every Station on Its Solemn Journey.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—The funeral train bearing the remains of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and the party of friends which accompanied them west arrived here this morning. The trip from Washington was an interesting one, and showed that everywhere the sad event had touched one of those chords that makes the whole world kin. From the time the train left

THE INDIANAPOLIS HOME.

Washington to its arrival here—even at night—the route was lined with sympathetic faces. At every station, however small, there was a group of waiting people who watched the train speed by with faces expressive of sorrow. At a number of places the track was lined on each side with school children.

A Great Crowd at Harrisburg.

The crowd in the station at Harrisburg was entirely too great to be confined within the limits appropriated to the public, and they swarmed through the gates and surrounded the train in large numbers. The particular points of attraction, of course, were the funeral car and the baggage compartment containing the floral emblems. As the people approached the Alroy, in which the casket lay, hats were doffed, and while much eagerness was shown in the efforts to obtain a glimpse, every movement was marked with the utmost respect and consideration. Not only was the station itself crowded but the streets leading to the grounds were filled with people. The stop at Harrisburg was only long enough to permit the necessary examination of the cars and to change engines and crews.

The Bells Played a Requiem.

The crowds that marked the transit of the train through the large cities was a striking evidence of the general regard in which Mrs. Harrison was held by the people of the country. In several instances they out-numbered the throngs that greeted the train bearing the president and party homeward from their trip to California last year. While the train stood in the station at Harrisburg the sweet strains of Muhlenberg's hymn, "I Would Not Live Always," pealing forth from the chimes of the First Lutheran church, a block or two from the station, greeted the ears of the passengers and fell like balm upon the sorely wounded hearts of the sorrowing ones.

A Contrast of Appliances.

At Duncannon, Newbury and elsewhere those scenes were repeated. While passing along this portion of the route members of the party on the train could not avoid making a mental contrast between the appliances of modern transportation and those in vogue half a century ago. Along the railroad and between it and the water of the blue Juniata which it skirted ran the old canal. On its waters in a canal boat of the ancient kind was borne the body of President William Henry Harrison on its way from Washington to its final resting place in the old family burying ground at North Bend, O. In this vicinity a number of old-fashioned wood bridges cross the Juniata at right angles to the line of the road, one end abutting almost against the track. On these over the piers were balconies built out on the face of the superstructure which afforded splendid views of the train as it passed along.

In the Forest Fire Region.

As the train approached Lewiston Junction it came into the drouth-stricken region, and a heavy pall of smoke hanging over one of the hills attracted attention. As it rounded the curve of the river and came directly in view of the limit of the fire exclamations of surprise were drawn from all who looked upon the sight. Running up the hillside from the water's edge to the summit was a distinct line of flames threading its way through the heavy growth of timber like a yellow ribbon. It was a sight that few, if any, had ever witnessed, and while none could lose sight of the dread consequences the weird beauty of the scene impressed itself upon all.

ARRIVED AT THE OLD HOME.

On sped the train through the smoky air and shortly after the shades of night fell over all and the stations passed were wrapped in gloom. Still it was seen that at each station there was a group who watched the train go by with heads bowed and hats doffed. Altoona was reached on time, engine and crew were changed and the journey was resumed. At this place the reception almost amounted to a demonstration. Pittsburg was reached at 10:40 p. m. and Steubenville, O., at 11:10. On passing into Indiana the stations en route all showed throngs of people and the scenes were similar to those through Pennsylvania and Ohio. The train reached this city at about 9:30 a. m. today.

Preparations at Indianapolis.

In the meantime Indianapolis was putting itself in funeral garb. Its business streets, bright but a few days since with decorations in honor of the discovery of the continant, told mutely of the approach of the funeral train from Washington. Sombre drapery was to be seen on every hand. Flags were displayed at half-mast from roof and window, and for block after block there was hardly a building that was not draped to a more or less elaborate extent. Some of the biggest structures had streamers of black ann white reaching from roof to sidewalk, or stretched across from window to window on every story. In others the goods had been removed from the show windows and replaced with mourning emblems and devices of various kinds; while crepe and white rosettes were displayed on many of the private residences along the streets over which the funeral procession moved to the cemetery.

No Official Ostentation.

United States Marshal Ransdell had charge of the funeral arrangements here and had arranged that ten soldiers from the United States arsenal should be active pall-bearers. But yesterday he received a message from Washington intimating that it was the president's desire that the arrangements be so changed as to dispense with the services of the ten soldiers. The request was due to the wish of the president to avoid anything savoring of official display or ostentation. The honorary pall-bearers were: Judge W. A. Woods, Thos. H. Sharpe, W. P. Fishback, Moses McLain, Dr. H. R. Allen, John B. Elam, Hugh Hanna, E. B. Martindale; General Lew Wallace, of Crawfordsville; Hon. W. E. Niblack, of Vincennes; John R. Elder, and Theodore P. Haughey.

Arrival of the Mourning Party.

So everything was ready when the funeral train arrived. For blocks all around the railway station the streets were crowded with people. Business in the city was nearly entirely suspended, and many industrial establishments had closed in honor of the gentle lady whose last journey was so near completed. Quickly the travelers disembarked, the casket was conveyed to the hearse, and the march was taken up for the First Presbyterian church followed by a number of carriages containing the funeral party and Indianapolis friends. The streets were lined with people who looked on in reverent silence as the cortege proceeded on its way.

The Veterans Turned Out.

As the cortege reached Ohio street a sight that must have warmed the heart of the president met his view. In military ranks between Meridian and Pennsylvania on both side of the street stood the various G. A. R. posts of the city—5,000 strong—turned out to do honor to the memory of their old comrade's wife. With uncovered heads they stood while the procession passed through the lines to the church. Here the casket was again lifted, carried into the church followed by the mourners, and deposited in front of the pastor's table. At its head was placed a vase filled with Jessica chrysanthemums eight feet high.

How the Church Was Draped.

And while the slight rustle of preparation for the solemn services was going on the draping of the church attracted the attention of those who were fortunate enough to obtain admission. The front of the big organ behind the pulpit platform had been entirely hidden with folds of drapery festooned in black and white, while above were three shields similarly festooned, and so arranged as to typify a burst of sunlight, the entire effect being extremely striking. Wide drapings of black ran the entire length of the edifice over the stained glass windows, relieved at each panel with monster rosettes of white. Two American flags were draped over the front of the gallery, beneath which the procession passed on entering the church. But there was no other display of the national colors. The ten side lights were festooned in black and white and smilax, while from each depended a cluster of carnations, roses, and palm leaves.

Services in the Church.

The church seats only about 800 people, so that organized clubs or other bodies could not be invited. One exception to this rule was made in behalf of about sixty members of General Harrison's regiment, the Seventieth, who were given seats in the south aisle. About one-third of the seating capacity of the edifice was reserved for the immediate family relatives and friends, and those of the general public who were first on the ground were admitted until every seat was occupied. The doors were then closed. Everything being in readiness the strains of the organ were heard in prelude, and then softly stealing through the edifice the voices of the choir singing "Lead Kindly Light." Rev. Dr. Haines, Mrs Harrison's pastor during the latter years of her residence in this city, then delivered a short invocation. A selection of Scripture was read and the pastor made a brief address. The mourners were then led in prayer by Rev. Dr. Hyde, of the Congregational church, and after the rendition of the hymn commencing "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," Dr. Haines pronounced the benediction. So ended the service.

AT CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

A Long Line of Carriages Follows the Body to Its "Windowless Palace."

Again the casket was lifted and borne down the aisle to the hearse, and the last stage of the sad journey was soon begun. As the bearers slowly made their way down the passage the audience rose to its feet and the organ softly played a solemn march. As the doors of the hearse closed on the casket for the last time a platoon of police swung into line in front. Following were the carriages containing the clergymen and pall bearers. The hearse was next and directly behind it came the president and the immediate relatives, followed by the members of the cabinet and their ladies. After these followed Governor Chase and the state officials, the ladies' board of the Orphan home, the members of the state supreme court, intimate lady friends and carriages in general. The total number of carriages in line exceeded 100. Formed in two lines on the route to the cemetery once more the veterans testified their reverence for the dead, as with uncovered heads they stood until the cortege had passed.

Made the Grave Bright With Flowers.

Straight out Meridian street to the cemetery the coretge moved. On either side stood thousands of people watching the scene. At the cemetery the grave had been prepared. It was lined with slabs of stones six inches thick, the seams being cemented. Loving hands had lined the tomb and its approaching with beautiful flowers. Upon arrival at the grave the president and immediate relatives took positions at one end and the officating clergymen at the other, while the balance of the funeral party took places at the sides and the others who had followed formed a aisle around. The services were short and soon to the words "Earth to Earth, Dust to Duts, Ashes to Ashes," the clods were heard falling over the form of the Beloved of the nation's president. "I heard a voice from Heaven saying unto me write: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors."

Slowly and sadly they turned away and left her to her everlasting rest. What were the emotions of the bereaved husband those who have passed through the fire of similar bereavement know. As the last spadefull of earth was laid on the mound the president and other mourners with streaming eyes sought their carriages and soon the spot was deserted and the last act in the drama of the life of Caroline Scott Harrison was ended.

REDRESS FOR IAMS.

Suit Against the Militia Officers in Progress.

PRELUSIVE SKIRMISH OF LAWYERS.

Claims Made by the Prosecution That Would Leave the Keystone National Guard Very Much Disfigured, Hardly in the Ring, in Fact—The Judge Withholds an Opinion—Homestead People Conclude That Violence Must Emigrate—Incendiary Talk bya Lawyer.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 28.—The case against Colonel Alexander Hawkins, Colonel J. B. R. Streator and Assistant Surgeon W. S. Grim, of the Tenth regiment, for tying Private W. L. Iams up by the thumbs at Homestead, was called for trial before Judge Porter yesterday. The court room was crowded, the majority of those present being national guardsmen. Private Iams was the target for all eyes. He sat behind his counsel, and did not appear to notice the crowd. At the opening of the case the defense moved to quash the indictment on the ground that the civil courts had no jurisdiction, the alleged offense having been committed when the guard was on active duty, and if the private prosecutor had any grievance he had a tribunal to appeal to which was created by the National guard act of 1887 establishing courts martial.

Arguments of Counsel.

Exhaustive arguments were made on this question by both sides. The defense claimed that the guard was on duty suppressing an insurrection, and in the punishment of mutiny, which they held Iams' offense to be, the officers of the Tenth regiment were justified in acting as they did. If the punishment was irregular or too severe then, it was maintained, a court-martial and not a civil court would have been the proper tribunal to appeal to. The prosecution held that military regulations gave the officers no right to inflict punishment without a court-martial so ordered it. Attorney Watson attacked the legal existence of the National guard, stating that the act creating it was unconstitutional, because it puts the guard under control of its officers instead of under the governor of the state.

Denounced the Militia Act.

The act he branded as a weak, vicious and revolutionary law, and the men who framed it, if they knew what they were doing, were guilty of treason. He said that if the court held it had no jurisdiction in the case it would be establishing a precedent not heretofore established by any court in the civilized world. The defense in reply said a court-martial was the proper tribunal, and the question narrowed down to this: Could the court-martial inflict a punishment similar to that a civil court is empowered to do in such a case? Judge Porter said the impression of the court is that a court-martial convened now in time of peace could only inflict military punishment. It would not have the power to punish as would civil courts.

Raised Another Legal Question.

Attorney Wright raised the question of the legal right of the national guard to be at Homestead. To aid civil authorities in maintaining the peace the governor has the power to call upon the national guard to resist an invasion, suppress a riot or insurrection, but is not given the power expressly to call them out to aid the civil authorities in maintaining the peace, for which purpose they were ordered to Homestead. Instead of sending the national guard, Watson said, the governor should have sent the sheriff. Another point the prosecution will attempt to show is that Private Iams was not legally enlisted. He entered the guard before he was 18 years old, without the consent of his parents, as is required by law. Judge Porter instructed the attorneys to have their pleadings ready this morning, when the court will pass upon the question of jurisdiction.

ONLY TWO ACTS OF VIOLENCE.

Homestead in Danger of Losing Its Bad Eminence.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Oct. 28.—Only two acts of violence were reported here last evening. A non-union boarding house on Ninth avenue was stoned, and the driver of a grocery wagon was compelled to drive for his life to escape an infuriated crowd because his employer sells his goods to the families of non-union workmen. The sheriff's deputies now on duty here number fifty men and more deputies are expected tomorrow. The non-union men in the mills are greatly agitated over the violent occurrences of the past few days and as a consequence very little work is being done.

The Citizens Wake Up.

A well-attended meeting of representative citizens of Homestead was held last evening for the purpose of voicing the sentiments of the law-abiding citizens. Many speeches condemnatory of the recent acts of violence were made and resolutions passed calling upon all good citizens to give the sheriff all possible aid toward suppressing disorder; also resolutions calling upon the sheriff to bring all his powers to bear in suppressing disorder, failing in which he shall call upon the governor of the state to send a sufficient military force to Homestead to preserve the peace.

A Lawyer Called to Account.

The recent acts of lawlessness at Homestead were yesterday called to the attention of the court at Pittsburg, and the indications are that there will be a number of arrests. D. R. Jones, the attorney formerly president of the Miners' union and more recently a member of the legislature, will be the first one to be called to account. Yesterday morning Sheriff McCleary appeared in the criminal court and asked for a rule on him, which was granted. The ground for the rule is the speech which he delivered at a hearing in the Halloran case before 'Squire Oeffner on Monday evening.

His Incendiary Advice.

He denounced the action of the deputy sheriffs, and advised the crowd of strikers present at the time that the deputies had no authority to make arrests unless they had warrants. He also told them that they had a perfect right to resist arrest, and they would be justified in killing if necessary. After the petition was presented Sheriff McCleary, accompanied by a number of special deputies, left on a train for Homestead to execute the orders of the court. The result of Jones' incendiary advice was that the same day a dozen brutal assaults were made on non-union men by strikers.

Another Odorless Gas Victim.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Charles Slayback, 20 years old, living at 4005 Wabash avenue, was found last evening asphyxiated by odorless fuel gas. Slayback makes the seventh victim of asphyxiation within a week in Hyde Park.

POLITICAL FIELD NOTES.

Cleveland Addresses Gotham Germans—Thurston's Views.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Ex-President Cleveland made another speech last night. The address was delivered to German Democrats in Cooper Union, which was crowded. His speech was brief and followed the lines of that delivered to the Buffalonian club the night before. He was enthusiastically received, and when he closed Carl Schurz delivered an extended address on the issues of the campaign. Hon. A. E. Stevenson had a long interview with Cleveland yesterday regarding his letter of acceptance.

What John M. Thurston Thinks.

John M. Thurston, of Omaha, is in town. The silver-tongued orator of the northwest is here to make some speeches for the Republican campaign managers. He will remain in the east for a few days. "You can announce," he said, "that Nebraska will cast her electoral ticket for Harrison. The sentiment of that state and of the west and northwest is Republican. Those who wandered away after a new idea will, I think, all be in the Republican ranks on election day."

Reed Speaks at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 28.—Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed delivered his first speech of the campaign in this city last night. Music hall was packed with 5,000 people, and the reception accorded the Maine man was a flattering one.

Other Campaign Thunder.

Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson addressed the Democracy of Stamford, Conn.

Senator Hill talked Democratic doctrine at Lynchburg, Va., making speeches both afternoon and night. There was a great turnout.

The Democratic state central committee of Colorado has withdrawn the Cleveland electors, substituting those of the Populists.

Governor Peck has signed the new Wisconsin apportionment, and the legislature has adjourned.

TOUGH JOKE ON PLUMMER.

Some Wag Gives Away His Winter Supply of Apples.

ANSONIA, Conn., Oct. 28.—W. H. Plummer, a wealthy resident of this town, has a number of fine apple trees on his grounds. Tuesday night when the sun went down he had stored in a summer house on his lawn eighteen bushel-baskets of fine fruit, all picked by himself. In the morning he intended to put the apples in his cellar. Soon after breakfast Wednesday morning he was called to the door by the coachman of a neighbor, who returned to him two empty baskets with the thanks of his employer for the gift of two bushels of apples. Mr. Plummer was surprised, and before he could speak the man had gone.

Before the aged fruit grower could settle the puzzle another neighbor returned three baskets with thanks. This led Mr. Plummer to investigate and he found every one of the eighteen baskets missing. By noon all but three of the empty baskets had been returned, each accompanied by the thanks of the recipients of Mr. Plummer's generosity. It was learned that during the night some practical joker had stolen the apples and distributed them with impartiality among the neighbors. Each basket contained a plain white card on which was the line in lady's handwriting: "Compliments of W. H. Plummer."

Want Knights to Go Into Politics.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 28.—The national convention of the Knights of Labor will convene in St. Louis Nov. 15. At that meeting efforts will be made to secure radical changes in the present laws governing the organization, the object being to work up a political party by advocating the claims of minority nominees, and while not coercing any one, using all the influence of the order to secure the votes of all its members for such minority candidate. Master Workman Dempsey thinks it quite probable that this projected new party may elect the next president and congress.

Wheelman Wiley's Card.

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 28.—Harry Wiley, the "dead broke bicycler," who is riding from New York to Chicago on a wager that he can get through without spending a cent, got in town Wednesday night over the National pike. He left New York, Oct. 17 and expects to reach Chicago next Wednesday. Wiley's card reads: "Please deliver to Mr. Wiley one square meal or a night's lodging and charge the same to human hospitality. Draw on your good nature. Seven Hope street, Kingdom Come."

Was Startled to His Death.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 28.—Thomas J. Carroll, a young stock farmer, was killed at Carpenter on the North Carolina and St. Louis railway yesterday. He was asleep in a coach when the sudden blast of a passing engine's whistle caused him to start and then rush out the rear door, leaping to the ground. He died instantly. It is believed that he thought the train was wrecked.

Money for the Homestead Strikers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Tomorrow every union workman in this city will donate one day's wages for the aid of the locked out iron and steel workers at Homestead. In addition to this fund the proceeds of the grand ball to be given at Battery D on Saturday evening under the auspices of the Trade and Labor assembly and Building Trades council will be added to the amount.

Twelve Persons Burned to Death.

VIENNA, Oct. 28.—The house of correction at Goellersdorf was burned yesterday. The fire spread with such rapidity that many of the 500 prisoners had to jump for their lives. Twelve are known to have been burned to death and others are missing. Many of those who escaped are still in custody are severely injured.

Suffocated in an Air Chamber.

ALTON, Ills., Oct. 28.—At the site of the new bridge which the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad is building across the Missouri river opposite this city, three new hands, while working in the air chamber of a steel caisson seventy-five feet below the surface of the river, forgot how to work the valve doors, and were smothered before relief could be furnished.

Literally Sawed His Head Off.

GARDEN CITY, Kan., Oct. 28.—William Harvey, a long-time resident of this place, has been suffering from mental aberration for some time. Wednesday morning, while out of his head, he arose at daylight, and going to an irrigation ditch 100 yards from his house he lay down in it and then almost literally sawed his head off with a dull carving knife.

HYPNOTISM AS AN ANÆSTHETIC.

Dr. Hamilton Osgood is authority for the facts of some remarkable surgical operations and cures performed while the patient was anæsthetized by hypnotism instead of chloroform. In other cases the patient was thrown into the hypnotic or mesmeric state, and then told that on awaking he would find great improvement in his condition. The improvement came each time as the result of the suggestion made to the patient's mind in the hypnotic state. Occasionally the patient was not even hypnotized, but simply told in the normal state by the doctor in a very positive manner that there would be improvement. Here, too, the cure progressed favorably. Certainly the plan is very simple and open to all medical practitioners, and it is worth their while to try it if here lies a possibility of alleviating human suffering.

One young woman had received a heavy fall that deprived her of the use of her lower limbs. "When placed upon her feet she sank to the floor as if her legs were mere pulp," said Dr. Osgood. She had been in this condition two years when Dr. Osgood took her case, and she suffered great pain. At the first interview she was hypnotized. After she had been put to sleep the doctor lifted one of the paralyzed limbs and said to the girl, "You cannot put this leg down." It remained fixed. Her legs were withered away to skin and bone, with apparently no muscle at all in them. Twice a week the doctor hypnotized the girl and repeated the suggestion until three months had elapsed. At the end of that time the patient was beginning to walk a little. The physician after that did not see her for nine months. Then he applied "hypnotic suggestion a few times as a tonic." The young woman in a short time recovered completely. Dr. Flower had these facts not only from Dr. Osgood, but also from the girl herself and from the matron at the hospital where she was cared for.

Dr. Flower cites other facts equally well authenticated, enough certainly to warrant scientific members of the medical profession who are ever ready to learn something new in trying their own power of mixing a little mental suggestion of health along with their medicine when they administer it. In all cases, whether the patient is hypnotized or not, the physician must powerfully and positively impress on him mental suggestions of cure and health. Without these suggestions from the brain and will of the physician there will be no cure when the patient is hypnotized, Dr. Flower informs us.—Portsmouth Progress.

Encouraging Hypnotism.

Dryness is always encouraging to hypnosis, while damp air disturbs the influence. Strong odor of flowers and certain perfumes are very often advantageous. Strong lights are by all means unfavorable. A mild and shaded light is always favorable. The subject's seat must be as comfortable as possible—the least noise, the buzzing of a fly, the creaking of shoes may disturb the good results in causing an involuntary concentration of thought, which tends to disturb the effects of the manipulations of the operator.

Without exception there should be a third person present in the room as witness to every hypnotic treatment involving unconsciousness of the subject. There will then be no cause for misunderstandings.

The time is near at hand when hypnotism will be employed in the majority of diseases that have so far thwarted all other treatment.—Chicago Herald.

Voting in the Japanese Parliament.

One of the first effects of introducing parliaments into Japan has been to stimulate inventors to discover some means of doing away with lobby divisions. Professor Zamakawa, of the University of Tokio, has devised an electrical machine by which each member can record his vote without leaving his seat. There will be a board placed back of the president's chair, like a hotel bell board. The yeas being first called, each member desiring to vote yea presses his aye button and records his vote, and the same way with the nays.—New York Sun.

The Fate of Some English Ships.

Several English and foreign warships which have been sold to the Norwegians are now carrying timber from port to port; the Marlborough, which conveyed so many thousands of our troops to India, is now moored at Gibraltar as a coal hulk, and the John Bertram, the American racing tea clipper, foundered some years ago while struggling along toward England with a cargo of petroleum.—London Standard.

He Had Lived in a Boarding House.

"I am afraid, dear," said the little woman timidly, "I'm afraid you will not think these biscuits of mine exactly right. They are my first, you know."

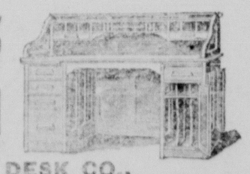

"On the contrary," rejoined gallant Mr. Lateweld promptly, "they are the very best I ever ate." And then he absentmindedly remarked, "Pass me another bowlder."—Kate Field's Washington

BRUTAL BUTCHERY

Mysterious Murder in a Suburb of Chicago.

AN OLD MAN FOULLY DEALT WITH.

Apparently Slaughtered While Entertaining His Murderers—Not a Clue to His Slayers, Who Carry Away Some Valuable Papers—The Deed Done with the Victim's Own Corn Knife and the Scene of the Crime Flooded with Human Gore—Ghastly Particulars.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—At his home in Melrose Ernest Kunneth, a small capitalist, was brutally murdered last Wednesday night. The victim met his death while he was sitting in a chair and holding a conversation with two unknown men. No sooner had the murderers accomplished their gory deed than they stole certain valuable papers which were in Mr. Kunneth's possession and fled. To reach the door of the house they had to literally wade through their victim's blood, and at the garden gate they separated, each leaving a crimson trail behind to mark his guilt. It was one of the most dartardly crimes of recent years, and has stirred the quiet villagers to a pitch of excitement bordering on frenzy.

Resembles the Snell Murder.

The murder resembles in its most prominent features the slaughter of the late Amos J. Snell. The object of the criminals was not currency, but the possession of some document or documents in Mr. Kunneth's strong box, and the evidence left behind them tells the story almost as perfectly as though it were written in an open book. Mr. Kunneth was a retired farmer, 67 years of age, and the possessor of a fine eighty-acre farm a mile northwest of Melrose, besides his little homestead in the village where he lived alone. Mr. Kunneth's habits were not extravagant and he had accumulated considerable money, which he had lent on first mortgages to various people, keeping the securities in a tin box beneath his bed.

Not Discovered Until Thursday.

Wednesday afternoon, shortly before 4 o'clock, Mrs. Alice Land met Mr. Kunneth on his way home. He wore no coat and had on his slippers. He went directly to his house and was not again seen alive by his neighbors. About 9:40 o'clock yesterday morning Deitrich Woehler, Mr. Kunneth's tenant on the farm, called with his wife to pay the rent. He knocked at the front door, but receiving no response finally tried the door, and finding it unlocked opened it and walked into the little parlor. Connecting the room with the dining-room are folding doors, which Woehler found almost closed. He opened them and let the light from the front windows fall upon an awful scene.

A Horrible Sight Presented.

In his high-backed armchair sat Mr. Kunneth, his head thrown back and so completely covered with coagulated blood as to be unrecognizable. The floor was covered with blood, which had been spattered upon the walls and woodwork, and all around were traces of a hurried search of the premises. Drawers had been opened and closets rummaged and all about were the marks of bloody hands. Two chairs were drawn beside the table facing that in which sat the murdered man, and when the neighbors hurried in in answer to Mrs. Woehler's screams they searched the rooms and found the instrument of death.

KILLED WITH A CORN KNIFE.

It was a huge corn knife with a blade fourteen inches long and broad and heavy in proportion. It was covered with blood and hair, and so great had been the force of the blows that the steel blade had been cracked almost in half. The weapon had been carelessly thrown beneath the dresser by the murderers. On the table by the old man's side was a bottle of Old Tom gin, a box of tobacco, and two half-smoked pipes. The murderers had evidently accomplished their object, for Mr. Kunneth's box of papers was gone from its accustomed place beneath his bed, and could not be found. On the door frame was the print of a bloody hand, and on the steps were the marks of bloody feet.

Not the Act of Strangers.

These led to the front gate where they separated, and for 200 feet north and for 100 feet south and for a distance west the footprints could be traced. These seemed the only clew. David C. Dolin, president of the village; Joseph P. Langguth, an intimate friend of Kunneth, and Henry Soffell, a stonecutter, are a unit on the theory that the murder was committed by parties who were well acquainted with Kunneth, by whom they were being entertained in a friendly way, for the old gentleman had a very sociable and congenial disposition.

View of the Victim's Body.

The victim's body presented a revolting sight when seen yesterday afternoon. The old man's smooth face and partially bald head has literally covered with coagulated blood. He was clad in a gingham shirt, wearing no coat, merely vest and trousers. His trousers from his knees up were covered with blood, indicating that his head had been forced down on his legs while he was being struck. Three fearful gashes in his head, one five inches long on the crown, one three inches long on the right and another over the right temple, are the ghastly traces of the weapon used. His arms were folded as though he had not moved after the fatal blow.

—E. H. Brewster was down near Walnut, Bureau county, yesterday, and heard much praise for the speech delivered there recently by Judge R. S. Farrand, —An immense house will greet the D. M. Bristol troupe tonight at the opera house.—Tickets are selling rapidly for tomorrow's matinee and evening entertainment.

Prof. Bristol has visited every section of the United States and Canada, and every where his entertainments have been pronounced by the public to be unique, novel, interesting, instructive and amusing.

—Complaint comes that a merchant who has promised to close his store Thursday evenings waited on customers there last night. If this is proven true the other merchants will not feel much like keeping their contract.

—Ex-Postmaster J. B. Charter had an arrearage; a deficit, so to speak; to pay yesterday. The postal department at Washington sent a draft through the post master here on the Judge, his predecessor, requesting that if immediate payment was not made, proceedings should be commenced against the bondsman. In the posting of the Judge's accounts it was found that the ex-postmaster was short in the sum of one cent and the draft was for that amount, which was paid on presentation. Was it a joke? Far from it. That is the way that Uncle Sam conducts his business affairs.

—The Democratic meeting last evening could not by the limited stretch of the most vivid imagination be denominated a success. The opera house was on the start perhaps a trifle more than half-filled. The speaker Clinton Furfish, of the Chicago Times, had been well advertised, and was introduced to the audience by Hon. S. Dixon. His speech, while touching on general topics of the present contest, was largely a review and reply to Senior Sherman's financial arguments. That he did not touch a popular vein or to any extent interest his auditors, was manifest from the continuous exit of democrats from the hall during his entire remarks.

—A letter from Samuel N. Jones, Chairman County Central Committee, of Winnebago County says: "The grand Republican rally of the campaign will be held in Rockford, November 2, 1892 The following speakers have signified their acceptance: General Lucius Fairchild, of Wis.; Hon. R. R. Hitt; General C. W. Pavey, and Hon. Richard Yates. Governor Fifer and others are confidently expected. The Industrial parade will be a magnificent feature of the day. Every industry will be represented. Five hundred floats will be in line. Grand agricultural and mechanical display. Farmers of Winnebago county are especially invited to participate. The parade of 1888 will be outdone. Parade will move at 10 a. m. Speaking at 1:30 p. m. at the Fair grounds. Torch light parade, fire works, etc., in evening. Speaking at various points during evening. A grand, rousing day for Republicanism."

Republican Rally at Morrison.

At the Republican rally in Morrison yesterday, fully 3,000 were present in the afternoon, and a still larger number in the evening. Quite a large number attended from Dixon. The town was handsomely decorated, and in the evening brilliantly illuminated with colored electric lights The evening parade was an imposing one The appearance of Governor Fifer everywhere called fourth bursts of enthusiasm. In his speech he took occasion to say that the 53 cent state tax levy, about which the Democrats made such an outcry four years ago, had been squeezed down to 33 cents on the $100 of assessed valuation, and in his second term he thought he would be able to get it down to 24 cents. which was as low as it could get. In speaking of Altgeld, he said that the leading Democratic organs admitted that he was nominated by a corrupt ring that had been captured by the size of his barrel. Fifer was followed by Lieut. Gov. Ray, who spoke on the business and financial issues. Secretary Pearson closed by comparing the expenditures of the state under Republican and Democratic administration. Last year only $2,700,000 was required, while twenty years ago $4,700,000 was needed to carry on the affairs of the state. The meeting throughout was eminently successful.

Evening prayer at St. Luke's church this evening at 7.30 o'clock The feast of S. S. Simon and Jude. All invited.

the last three being maids; Misses Carrie Crouch, Woodruff and Marsh, of Chicago. An unfortunate combination of circumstances prevented the attendance of Mr. Herbert, Mr. Crouch's partner, and Mr. I. W. Earl, intimate friends of the family.

THE COSTUMES.

No adequate idea of the brilliancy of the wedding and reception can be had without a description of the handsome costumes, and THE TELEGRAPH therefore will briefly depict the more notable ones

First in interest and magnificence was the costume of the bride, who was attired in a Mary Stuart gown of heavy bengaline, trimmed with Duchess lace. Veil of tulle and court train. Ornaments of diamonds. She carried an exquisite bouquet of bridal roses.

Miss Arnold wore a white dotted silk, empire style; veil fastened with forget-me-nots Carried red roses.

All of the maids wore white silk empire gowns with coronets of forget me-nots, and bearing baskets of chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Flint wore a lavender satin dress trimmed with velvet. Black lace and diamonds.

Mrs. Dille, silk crepon with green velvet trimmings. Full train.

Mrs. Crane, green file silk, lace trimmings.

Mrs. Davis, black lace garment.

Mrs. King, brown silk and olive green velvet

Mrs. Abbott, mauve silk and black lace.

Mrs Whittelsey, light cloth with lace trimmings.

Miss Crouch, green silk trimmed with velvet.

Mrs. Augur, white silk with square train, brocade trimmings.

Mrs. Beaver, black silk with natural flowers.

Miss Woodruff pink satin frock

Mrs. H. E. Donaldson, white brocade silk.

THE PRESENTS.

That the gifts were valuable and equisite is self-evident to all who know the esteem in which the bride and groom are held by their friends. We will not attempt to describe them, but will merely give a list of the more seemly ones:

A bird-eye maple chair, brocaded brocatel from Hrof. and Mrs. C. W. Boucher; Banquet lamp from the Faculty. French onyx clock, Prof. and Mrs. Dille. Wrought iron Candelabra, S. W. Earl. Silver baking dish, A. Davis. Fancy India Ink head, Mr. Defrain. Handsome chair, H. Camp & Son. Royal Worcester bric-a-brac, A. G. Welsh, Elgin. Grecian amphora, Claude Bellingslea. After dinner coffeys, Marguerite Maginnes. Carving set, Mr. Kennard. Complete set of dining room furniture from Mother. Silver fruit basket, G. W. I. Brown. Banquet lamp, Hulda Crawford. Bronze chair from the ushers. Marble clock, onyx trimming, Fleta M. Holman.

IMPORTANT DETAILS.

The carriages for the occasion were furnished by Rosbrook & Wasley, and L. O. Rosbrook had entire direction of the arriving and departing carriages. His drivers all in high silks and livery were quite an innovation to Dixon. The excellent carriage facilities made things very convenient for the guests.

Marshal Charles Ball had supervision over the crowd at the college, and to his good management is due all avoidance of a crush.

Geo. K. Reynolds, the caterer, had his hands full, but his department was well attended to, as were all others.

CONCLUSION.

When the guests had departed from the reception the wedding party gathered in the dining room and observed the time-honored custom of securing the ring in the cake and of getting the bridal roses. J. E. Thomas drew the ring and Miss Barge was the fortunate finder of the bouquet

After this most of the young people went to the Dixon Club where they enjoyed a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Crouch left on an early train on their honeymoon tour, their objective point being Chattanooga, from whence they will go to New Orleans. Mrs Crouch's going away dress was a tailor-made tweed, hat and all en suite. After November 16 they will be at home in their pretty new residence in Auburn Park. Mr. Crouch is the Vice President of the National Journalist company and is an able and successful young business man of Chicago. Miss Flint is too well known to need an introduction as an accomplished handsome young lady

With spirits congenial and with true love biuding them, they will surely be of that class described by the poet as

"The happiest of their kind,
Whom gentle stars unite, and in one fate
Their hearts, their fortunes, and their being blend."

THE SIXTH SENSE.

Wonderful Work by Paul Alexander Johnstone.

[Associated Press Telegram.]

CHICAGO, Ills., Sept. 18r—Paul Alexander Johnstone, the mind-reader whose recent feat of picking a name out of the register at the Grand Pacific hotel after a long drive blindfolded through crowded streets attracted such wide attention, performed another feat today, which to all appearances totally disproves the theory that man possesses only five senses, and also the belief that mind-reading is really a specious of muscle-reading. Johnstone opened a difficult combination safe in the presence of many well-known people at the Wellington hotel, and under the following remarkable conditions: He was blind-folded and the bandages thoroughly examined by a committee His ears were packed with cotton so it was impossible for him to hear, then his nostrils were similiarly filled to destroy for the time being the sense of smell, and finally his hands were covered with thick gloves to disprove the theory of muscle reading. In his mouth he held a lighted cigar, so that even the sense of taste was temporarily destroyed. The proprietors and book keepers of the hotel then took a position behind him, and while Johnstone turned the knob of the safe they were requested to think of the combination without touching either of the gentlemen. The mind-reader turned correctly to the number and swung the door open. The crowd which witnessed the act cheered him repeatedly. Johnstone declares that his idea in opening the safe under such peculiar conditions was simply to prove that man possesses more than five senses and that science is in error. In conversation the mind-reader couples his performance today as in some respects comparing in importance to the scientific world with the discovery of the circulation of the blood or the law of gravitation.—Minneapolis Tribune Sept. 19.

Altgeld as a Sharper.

Under date of April 22, 1892, the Chicago Herald, a radical democratic paper, contained the following scathing denunciation of the democratic candidate for governor:

June 8, 1888, John P. Altgeld, then judge of the superior court of Cook county, instituted an action in the circuit court against the city of Chicago for trespass, laying his damages at $60,000. The damages were claimed for injuries done to two lots belonging to the plaintiff, at the corner of Market and Jackson streets, by the construction of the Jackson-street bridge. The trial was had June 16, 1888, Altgeld being the only witness as to the character and amount of the damages. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $26,494.

Counsel for the city made a motion for a new trial, which was heard by Judge Waterman. The affidavits of Matson Hill and George G. Newbury, real estate experts, were filed in support of the motion. Hill swore that Altgeld's damages "did not exceed $7,500," and Newbury testified that they "did not exceed $5,000." The most startling piece of evidence, however, was that disclosed by the affidavit of W. R. Northway, city engineer.

Mr. Northway stated that the contract for building the center pier of the Jackson street bridge was let March 10, 1887, and the work was nearly completed before September 1, 1887, on which last named date Altgeld, according to his own declaration, supported by the records, became possessed of the property alleged to have been damaged.

Mr. Northway's affidavit was submitted to show that the damage of which Altgeld complained was in progress six months before he owned the property. During the argument on the motion Judge Green, representing the city, characterized Altgeld's actions in the case as "discourteous to the city." He stated that Altgeld had been informed that a certain agreement as to the time of the original trial could not be carried out.

Judge Altgeld, who was present as his own attorney when Green made this statement, arose, with clinched fists, and, assuming a threatening attitude, exclaimed: "It's a lie! It's a lie! I say it is an infamous lie!" Judge Waterman, who was presiding interrupted Altgeld, rebuking him severely, and requiring him to apologize to Judge Green. The apology was made.

The motion for a new trial was argued and submitted June 19. Three days afterward, on June 22, Judge Waterman rendered judgment overruling it, and in doing so caused the following order to be entered of record:

"During the argument on the motion for a new trial there occurred a gross breach of the decorum which should be maintained in a court of justice. A serious and grave contempt of this tribunal was committed, and, although an apology was made as directed by the court, yet I do not think it will do to have it understood that so grave an offense can be atoned by a mere apology. I feel that it is my duty in this case to enter a fine of $100 against John P. Altgeld for contempt of court."

The fine was paid the following day. The counsel for the city excepted to Judge Waterman's rulings in denying a new trial and carried the case to the appellate court, which reversed the judgment of the circuit court and ordered a new trial, because of a "manifest error in judgment." At the second trial in the circuit court Judge Altgeld secured a verdict against the city for $15,000, which he immediately assigned to a Chicago attorney.

[It should be added that the second judgment was obtained during the Cregier administration. The judgment being assigned was paid. Altgeld got the $15,000, the Cregier law officers raising no serious objection.]

The Herald's comments on the facts as set forth are:

What do the democratic voters of Illinois think of a candidate for governor of the state who, while occupying a judicial position in Cook county, appeared in the court of another judge in the capacity of litigant and attorney and so conducted himself that he was rebuked by the court, compelled to apologize to the opposing lawyer, and was fined $100 for contempt? Does the foregoing history indicate the character and temperament of a man suitable to be the chief executive of a great commonwealth?

No comment by the Chicago Herald is necessary on the other facts revealed in the litigation referred to. The record speaks for itself. The building of the bridge at Jackson street had been in progress nearly six months before Judge Altgeld acquired the property for damaging which, as he alleged, he obtained judgment against the city. The voters can draw their own conclusions from a knowledge of the facts as to the propriety of his conduct in that respect.

A more scandalous transaction was never recorded than this. Observe—the damage complained of accrued six months before he became the owner. The property was really benefited rather than damaged. His claim for damage must have been made under oath. Failing to get his award confirmed on the second trial, he spent $7,000 to defeat the reelection of Mayor Roche, well knowing that the questionable route into the city treasury would be easier under a democratic administration, and it was, for he obtained a verdict in his favor for $15,000, which he immediately assigned to "a Chicago attorney" in order to insure its collection. His brutal and ruffianly conduct in court, for which he was fined $100, is a clear insight into the character of the man, whose greed is as colossal as his ambition, and who is about as fit for the office of governor as purgatory would be for the storage of dynamite.

Our Candidate for State Treasurer.

Henry L. Hertz has made a splendid canvass, and by his genial, cordial manner of meeting and greeting the people won his way to popularity, unusual in a comparative stranger. Though not noted as a speech-maker, there is a taking power in what he does say that goes home with his hearers every time. He tells the people frankly that he was born abroad, a matter in which he was not at all consulted. But while a foreigner by birth he asks no one to vote for him on that account, but solely because he is an American citizen, having sworn allegiance to this country, and in heart and sympathy identified with it—believing it to be the best government on earth. While loving this country with devotion, he was not expected to forget the land of his birth, but the new home was his home, and the home of his children, who were identified with our institutions, his sons being attendants in the public schools. While constantly avering that he cannot make a speech, and is not going to try, he usually succeeds in making a favorable impression on his hearers, and when the votes are counted out it will be seen that Hertz is constructed for fast running.

The highest responsibility resting on an American citizen is that of voting; a most sacred duty, yet one so frequently neglected as to be well-nigh criminal. Avoidance of this plain duty, by our best citizens, puts the machinery of government into disreputable and dangerous hands, and for this, the "trooly good" non voter is responsible.

Between the city riff-raff, who vote early and often, and the elegant, high-toned citizen who never votes at all, our dearly bought institutions are being rapidly crucified. Our republican form of government cannot long endure the strain forced on her by these two conspiring classes.

The Whole Tariff Argument in Brief

From the Indianapolis Journal: "I am a Republican because I am a protectionist," said a mechanic in this city, in an address Friday evening, "and I am a protectionist because I support myself wife and children by the wages I earn at a mechanic's bench, and I support them in comfort because the wages I earn are double those I could earn in Great Britain, and they are double because the products of my labor are protected against the free competition of those of cheaper labor countries by the McKinley tariff." There have been longer, but it is impossible that there have been better speeches during the campaign.

—The LaSalle Tribune has these words of advice, which many will read, acknowledge eminently sensible, and then go and do just the other way:

"We have a word of advice to those of our readers who are liable to get politically excited and bet on the election—don't. If you lose you are 'out' that much good money, and if you win custom requires that you should 'blow in the boodle,' which leaves you short on cash and long on headaches. Keep your money and don't lose your temper. There will be just the same amount of land to the acre no matter which party is successful."
